

The Cashier who never understood money.

$17.60 per hour it is!

DIVYANG DESAI

JAN 02, 2026

Share

$17.60 CAD per hour, $15 something after taxes. Average 27 hrs of work every week
 $27 \times 4 \times 15 = \1620 for the entire month.

Im 25. An immigrant who lives near Toronto. Its been 4 months since I completed last semester of college. $1620 is what I approximately earn while working as a cashier. $1620 is a tricky amount; enough to rent a private room, buy groceries that are enough for me to have 4 meals a day, the cost of travelling, phone bill and ideally should cover everything.

Divyang's Substack is a reader-supported publication. To receive new posts and support my work, consider becoming a free or paid subscriber.

But I am 25.

I am curious, ambitious but vegetarian. Hence I must spend $80 to buy dozens of books on my kindle every month, $70 to add another pair of old money clothes to wardrobe (Temu!), one more pair of sneakers once every 2 months, $20 dollar per month for the gym membership and then as im a vegetarian, lets buy some tofu, paneer, soya chunks, whey protein and CREATINE MONOHYDRATE as well because it is recommended by Andrew Huberman, a professor of neurobiology and ophthalmology at Standford School ofok.....stop...enough!!!

Every Sunday after processing how being 25 feels like, I go through a 3- thought that drives my life currently:

Thought 1: Why do I earn just $1620?!

Thought 2: You only live once!

Thought 3: Ive got a credit card though.

Hey Reader,

I hope you are doing well! Im Divyang who works as a cashier at a store and its n rhymes with Walmart. I see thousands of dollars being spent every day in front o eyes but I never understood how money actually works. I want to understand abc factors affecting the credit score, taxes, savings, budget and so on. Hence, Im sta a journey of 2 articles per week to teach myself the fundamentals of personal fina If you are someone who has been delaying this for a while like me then I would b to have you along with me in this journey.

I wish and hope to serve myself and readers with well researched information of personal finance 2 days(Monday & Friday) every week for next 20 weeks.

See you on Monday January 5, 2026.

Divyang's Substack is a reader-supported publication. To receive new posts and support my work, consider becoming a free or paid subscriber.

4 Likes

Discussion about this post

Comments

Restacks