

Product = Respire, Mouth tape for better sleep, nose breathing, and reduced snoring

One reader = Someone struggling with snoring, mouth breathing, or poor sleep quality

Things to search for:

- The specific problem our product solves — snoring, mouth breathing during sleep, dry mouth, sleep apnea, poor sleep quality
- The general topic that problem relates to — sleep quality, nose vs. mouth breathing, bio-hacking, jawline/mewing
- Common solutions / competitors — Zygo Tape, MyoTape, “hostage tape,” “night lips,” chinstraps, CPAP / APAP / BiPAP machines, full-face masks, humidifiers, 3M Medipore tape

IVOC Data

Desires:

- “I think I ate my tape yesterday”
- “Whenever I try I just wake up with tape on the bottom of my foot”
- “What’s a good tape to use that’s not hostage or night lips, also beard friendly”
- “I just finished night two of mouth taping... and I’m in shock at how much better I have slept these two nights. Holy moly.”
- “I’m a woman in my 60s. 2 months maybe 3 I saw ads for these expensive boxed lip shaped tape specifically used for keeping your mouth shut while sleeping and I’m so happy I did. For yrs I’ve been trying to sleep on my back which I don’t like putting a pillow under my chin to keep my mouth closed. A good idea however wasn’t good enough. I got to where strange noises coming out of my mouth waking me up often and not having my pleasant vivid dreams became disturbing and chaotic. My mouth was always very dry. After seeing ads on the mouth tape I wasn’t about to spend a lot of money on a product just to close my mouth. I searched my favorite stores medical supplies and found a strong waterproof tape that I continue to use.

However it’s so sticky it was hard to take off my lips wondering if I was going to create a mustache. And quite painful... So I place it on the back of my hand for about 30 seconds, pull it off then use it and it’s not as sticky. I thought I had early signs of dementia because my memory was getting so bad it drove me crazy. So after taping my mouth shut when I slept my dreams were more amazing, my blood pressure improved and I could lay down in any position sleeping 5 to 8 hours straight. I hadn’t related breathing through my nose while sleeping as a memory improvement until I realized my memory was improving after a month or more.”

- “If your concerned about the enviornment btw it only takes a very small amount and I have used paper tape which is a bit more friendly. But it was ripping my beard hair and... Apparently I drool and it wouldn’t hold up to that lol.”

- “The second benefit for me is social. My freight train snoring has stopped me from group activities if shared accommodation was involved such as overnight travel with a group or taking a trip with a friend. I have an upcoming long haul trip to Asia and was already thinking about sleeping and disturbing others.”
- “I use mouth tape at night but recently my mouth still opens up and saliva here and there. my sleep quality took a nose dive, it was okay before i was breathing normally with my nose. What happened?”
- “Used to be a gagger. Started mouth taping 3 weeks ago. I’m sold on mouth taping.”
- “The sleep clinic Dr and the respiratory therapist I saw both seem extremely hesitant to believe that myotherapy and possibly braces will help me with my apnea. It’s so validating to see that it has helped you! I haven’t had my consult yet with the myotherapist, but my apap has been KILLING my throat since I mouth breath unless I consciously change my breathing to my nose.”
- “Patient here. I used a chinstrap for a few years before I got sick of having a bunch of crap wrapped around my head and started using tape. I use 3M Medipore 2" tape. I apply it slightly offset so that a contortion of my mouth allows me to puff out some air when excess pressure builds up in my mouth but not enough space that my lips will come apart inadvertently... I've only been using the tape for about 2 months or so but I like it so far.”
- “5:57 AM. Monday, I tried it last night and the results were amazing I slept through the night. (Which I rarely do) woke up feeling very refreshed.”
- “My snoring was literally waking MYSELF up almost every hour. First night taping I slept 6 hours straight. I was always fatigued throughout the day and feel so much better now.”
- “...I tried EVERYTHING in the last 4 years and nothing worked. One time I even took 3 pills combined. First night of mouth taping and I slept really well. Better than all of the nights on the last 4 years.”
- “Mouth tape helped me to start having dreams again too. Dreaming is a clear sign you are sleeping better.”
- “I’ve been having insomnia every single night for the last 4 years. I couldn’t have ONE good night of sleep during those years and I tried different medicine, habits, meditating, exercising... NOTHING WORKED. Every night was a torture. Today I tried to mouth tape and to my surprise IT WORKED. I slept really well compared to before and I will keep mouth taping because I’m really confident that my sleep will get even better. IF YOU ARE READING THIS COMMENT I BEG YOU TO TRY MOUTH TAPING.”
- “My mouth is tapped for the first time tonight and I battle with insomnia. This made me so excited to read!” — followed up with “It has been working the past couple of nights! Crazy!!”

Firm Notions:

- “I’ve been doing it for about 10 years now. If I skip more than a night my snoring really starts to ramp up.”
- “once you start doing this there's no turning back”
- “An underrated bio hack!”
- “When we breathe by our mouth we send a signal to our body through the receptors inside our mouth that it is time to fight or flight, which means we will always stay in an extremely alert or agitated mode. Whenever we breathe by our nose there are other neural receptors in our nose which send a signal of rest and digest, which means stay calm, life's going slowly, no need to worry. That's why nose breathing is important.”

- “Mouth breathers inhale more bugs. That's the most important reason to be a nasal breather.”
- “Yes, important info to keep mouth close most of the time except you are in fight or flight (WHM or highest intensity sport)... In Sports I try - buteyko like - breathing through my nose as long as it feels OK.”
- “Mouth taping greatly improves uptake and utilization of nitric oxide.”
- “my daughters speech therapist recommends myotape- it's a rectangle u essential put around ur lips which promotes closed mouth posture but allows lips to open if needed”
- “The first couple nights may suck, and you may not wear it for the entire night, but eventually your nose adapts”
- “Doctor, one of the significant negative consequences of sleep apnea or upper airway resistance is episodes of oxygen desaturation... Given the leading cause of mouth breathing is not being able to get enough O2 through one's nose, the adaptation is to open one's mouth to get that oxygen; forcing the mouth closed with a chin strap or blocking the mouth with tape is counter to what we're trying to achieve. A full-face mask is more appropriate. Before using a full face mask, the strategy to try first is to turn up the humidity...”
- “Why aren't you honest and stop using filters? Don't you want to give people a realistic idea for their own expectations? Oh that's right this is just click bait!”
- “I tried EVERYTHING in the last 4 years and nothing worked... NOTHING WORKED. Every night was a torture.”

Shakeable Notions:

- “Can I use duct tape” — “I wouldn't”
- “Interesting. Do you think a mask would work instead of tape?”

Identifications:

- “I’m a woman in my 60s”
- “Patient here. I used a chinstrap for a few years...” (sleep apnea / CPAP patient)
- “My freight train snoring...” (heavy snorer)
- “Used to be a gagger.”
- “I battle with insomnia”
- “I’ve been having insomnia every single night for the last 4 years”

Characteristics:

- Has tried multiple prior solutions before finding mouth tape (chinstraps, CPAP/APAP, braces, myotherapy, pillows under chin, sleep pills, meditation, exercise)
- Becomes evangelical once the product works for them (“IF YOU ARE READING THIS COMMENT I BEG YOU TO TRY MOUTH TAPING” / “I’m sold” / “once you start there’s no turning back” / “underrated bio hack”)
- Dissatisfied with premium branded tape options (“hostage,” “night lips,” “expensive boxed lip shaped tape”) — actively seeks cheaper drugstore/medical supply alternatives
- Does their own research on Reddit, YouTube, Facebook comment sections before buying
- Experiments with application technique on their own (offset placement, de-sticking on the back of the hand, paper tape for environment)

Other:

- “I think I ate my tape yesterday” — funny mishap
- “Whenever I try I just wake up with tape on the bottom of my foot” — funny mishap
- “wondering if I was going to create a mustache” — funny self-deprecation about sticky tape
- “I hadn’t related breathing through my nose while sleeping as a memory improvement until I realized my memory was improving after a month or more.” — unexpected secondary benefit
- “my blood pressure improved” — unexpected secondary benefit
- “Mouth tape helped me to start having dreams again” — unexpected secondary benefit

Common Words/Phrases:

- biohack / “an underrated bio hack”
- mouth taping / nose breathing / mouth breathing
- “freight train snoring”

- “gagger”
- “Holy moly”
- CPAP / APAP / BiPAP
- myotape / chinstrap
- mewling
- “no turning back”
- “sold on [mouth taping]”
- “click bait”
- All-caps emphasis for stakes: “NOTHING WORKED,” “IT WORKED,” “KILLING my throat,” “I BEG YOU”
- “waking MYSELF up”
- “first night” / “night two” — people count nights as milestones
- Nitric oxide / fight or flight / rest and digest (borrowed physiology jargon)

IVOC Summaries

Desires:

Desire to sleep better / through the night / wake refreshed 8
Desire to stop snoring and stop disturbing others 4
Desire for tape that actually stays on through the night 3
Desire for beard-friendly tape 2
Desire for an affordable tape (not overpriced branded boxes) 2
Desire for an alternative to chinstraps / bulky CPAP gear 2
Desire to overcome chronic insomnia 2
Desire to stop drooling / manage saliva at night 2
Desire for something that works after “trying everything” 2
Desire for tape that isn’t painful/too sticky on removal 1
Desire to fix a dry mouth 1
Desire to stop gagging at night 1
Desire to feel validated for trying a non-clinical solution 1
Desire for social / travel freedom (no more shared-room anxiety) 1

Desire for improved memory / mental sharpness 1
Desire for better overall health markers (blood pressure, dreaming, recovery) 1
Desire to reduce daytime fatigue / grogginess 1

Firm Notions:

Nose breathing is fundamentally healthier than mouth breathing (rest-and-digest, more nitric oxide, fewer bugs inhaled) 3
"I tried everything and nothing worked" before mouth taping 2
Long-term users don't go back — "10 years" / "no turning back" 2
The first few nights suck but you adapt 1
Mouth taping is an "underrated biohack" 1
MyoTape (competitor) is therapist-recommended and effective 1
Keep mouth closed except during high-intensity exercise / fight-or-flight 1
If you skip a night, the snoring comes right back 1
(Skeptic — medical authority) Mouth taping is counter to proper sleep-apnea treatment; a full-face mask or more humidity is the real answer 1
(Skeptic) Jawline-improvement claims from mouth taping are just filters and click bait 1

Shakeable Notions:

Duct tape might be a fine substitute for purpose-made mouth tape 1
A mask (instead of tape) might work just as well 1

Identifications:

Sleep apnea / CPAP/APAP patient — core identification 2
Chronic insomniac — core identification 2

Heavy / “freight train” snorer — core identification 2
Older adult (60s+) 1
Former gagger 1

Characteristics:

Has tried many other solutions before arriving at mouth tape 5
Turns evangelical once the product works (publicly recommends / begs others to try) 4
Dissatisfied with expensive branded tape and hunts for cheaper alternatives 2
Self-experiments with application technique (de-stickying, offset placement, paper tape) 1

Other:

Funny mishaps with tape (swallowed it, found on foot, mustache fears) 3
Unexpected secondary benefits beyond sleep (memory, blood pressure, dreaming) 3
Genuine confusion about whether alternatives (duct tape, masks) would work 2

Summary Rankings

IVOC Summary
Sleep apnea / CPAP/APAP patient — core identification

IVOC Summary
Chronic insomniac — core identification
Heavy / “freight train” snorer — core identification
Older adult (60s+) — identification
Former gagger — identification
Desire to sleep better / through the night / wake refreshed 8

Characteristic: Has tried many other solutions before arriving at mouth tape 5
Desire to stop snoring and stop disturbing others 4
Characteristic: Turns evangelical once the product works 4
Firm Notion: Nose breathing is fundamentally healthier than mouth breathing 3
Desire for tape that actually stays on through the night 3
Other: Funny mishaps with tape 3
Other: Unexpected secondary benefits beyond sleep (memory, blood pressure, dreaming) 3
Firm Notion: "I tried everything and nothing worked" before mouth taping 2
Firm Notion: Long-term users don't go back 2
Desire for beard-friendly tape 2
Desire for an affordable tape (not overpriced branded boxes) 2
Desire for an alternative to chinstraps / bulky CPAP gear 2
Desire to overcome chronic insomnia 2
Desire to stop drooling / manage saliva at night 2
Desire for something that works after "trying everything" 2
Characteristic: Dissatisfied with expensive branded tape 2
Other: Genuine confusion about alternatives (duct tape, masks) 2
Firm Notion (Skeptic — medical authority): Mouth taping is counter to proper sleep-apnea treatment 1
Firm Notion (Skeptic): Jawline improvement claims are just filters / click bait 1
Firm Notion: MyoTape is therapist-recommended 1

IVOC Summary
Firm Notion: The first few nights suck but you adapt 1
Firm Notion: Mouth taping is an "underrated biohack" 1
Firm Notion: Keep mouth closed except during high-intensity exercise 1
Firm Notion: Snoring comes right back if you skip a night 1
Shakeable Notion: Duct tape might be a fine substitute 1
Shakeable Notion: A mask (instead of tape) might work just as well 1

Desire for tape that isn't painful / too sticky on removal 1
Desire to fix a dry mouth 1
Desire to stop gagging at night 1
Desire to feel validated for trying a non-clinical solution 1
Desire for social / travel freedom 1
Desire for improved memory / mental sharpness 1
Desire for better overall health markers (BP, dreams, recovery) 1
Desire to reduce daytime fatigue / grogginess 1
Characteristic: Self-experiments with application technique 1